By Associated Press.

PARIS, June 22.—The French war office this afternoon gave out a statement on the progress of hostilities which reads:

"The seaport of Dunkirk was bombarded last night by a force of long range artillery. Fourteen shells were thrown and some persons belonging to the civil population were killed."

ITALIAN CAMPAIGN IN PROGRESSING SLOWLY

ROME, via Paris, June 22.—The following official statement was issued tonight by the general staff of the Italian army:

"There is nothing to report on the Tyrol-Fronton front except small engagements between reconnoitering parties in the San Felice valley, where we occupied Ponte Tresa and the upper Corna valley."

"In Carina we continued our operations against Malborghetto. During the night of the 20th and 21st the Austrians renewed their attacks on the 20th."

"In the eastern zone of Monte Nero operations started on the 19th were carried to a successful conclusion on the 20th."

"By repeated night attacks against the positions occupied by us on the left bank of the Isarco at Pavia, the enemy is trying to throw us back on the right bank. His efforts break down, however, against the stubborn resistance of our troops."

NO SECRET PEACE PLANS MADE BY UNITED STATES

WASHINGTON, June 22.—President Wilson revealed today that all the offers of mediation in Europe which the United States had made publicly or privately, including the plan to mediate between Germany and the United States, and that at the present no new offers were being made.

Foreign governments generally, he said, were aware of the desire of the United States to bring peace to assist in bringing peace.

BOER REBELS GET SIX YEARS AS A TRAITOR

BLOEMFONTEIN, Union of South Africa, via London, June 22.—A sentence of six years' imprisonment and a fine of $10,000 was imposed today on General Christiaan de Wet, one of the leaders of the South African rebellion against the British government, who was found guilty yesterday of treason on eight counts.

DE WET, 52, was born in 1859, and was a member of the Orange Free State army. He was captured by the British in 1900, and was released in 1902. He was again captured in 1914, and was sentenced to life imprisonment. He was released in 1915, and was again captured in 1915, and was sentenced to life imprisonment.

ONLY SUNDAY HAVES
LONDON, June 22.—Nothing but a sudden and unexpected blow by Grand Duke Nicholas, commander-in-chief of the Russian forces, can save London from returning to the possession of its former owner and the almost immediate evacuation of the city by the Russians is expected in London.

After yielding on the Dnepr line the Russian armies retired to virtually the outskirts of the city of Lemberg itself. The Austrians are expected to attack the Russians at any moment, and the city is expected to be captured by the Russians in a few days.

In the opinion of British observers this retirement has been up to the present time, a well executed movement. Dispatches reaching here say the armies of Emperor Nicholas are virtually intact and that their ability to resume the initiative once their ranks have been refilled and their ammunition replenished has not been greatly impaired.

This interval, however, it is argued here, will give the German allies opportunity to reap the fruits of their victory. They will be able to withstand assaults from the east with much smaller forces than were required successfully to attack, and large masses of men will be released. Whether they are offered against the Russians further to the north or against the British and French in the eastern zone is a secret of German headquarters, although the successes of the allies are officially announced.

On the other hand the Germans in North Russia and Poland are consolidating their gains in a manner which suggests more important movements in this region. The seaport of Libau is being strongly fortified.

SIX ROAD VIEWERS WHOSE TERMS EXPIRED ARE NAMED

Judge Van Swearingen Reappoints Them and Assigns Duties for County Board.

Special to The Courier.

UNIONTOWN, June 22.—Six members of the Fayette county board of permanent viewers authorized by the act of June 23, 1911 were re-appointed today at the opening of the regular Tuesday forenoon session of court by Judge J. Q. Van Swearingen. The viewers, whose terms have expired, and who were named to serve for terms of three years beginning today are:

William H. Hinn, of Jefferson township; J. V. E. Ellis, of Uniontown; J. H. Landerberger, of Lower Tyrone township; William S. McClay, of Uniontown; David E. Hinn, of Uniontown.

Following the appointment of the six members on the board of viewers, Judge Van Swearingen named viewers on several petitions asking for viewers.

UNIONTOWN, June 22.—After having refused a divorce to Elmer King, of Uniontown, from his wife, Hannah King, a few weeks ago because of the insufficiency of testimony, Judge J. Q. Van Swearingen today granted the divorce after more testimony had been filed. The Kings were married at Kutztown on January 27, 1892. According to the testimony of ex-Chief of Police George Hetzel, of Connellville, Mrs. King, who now resides at Oliver No. 1, lived for a time in Queen street, Connellville. He testified that he with other officers called her house on April 2, 1912. He said that the general reputation of the place was a house for immoral practices. The divorce was granted by Judge Van Swearingen after the testimony of Kate Koffer.

William Schiffman, of Uniontown, who is now employed at Uniontown, was granted a divorce from his wife, Hannah Schiffman, on June 22, 1915. The divorce was granted by Judge Van Swearingen after the testimony of Kate Koffer.

OPPOSE PARDON FOR GIRL WHO ABDUCTED WHITLA BOY*Charge That Helen Doyle Would Make Movie of the Case,
Is Denied.

By Associated Press.

HARRISBURG, June 22.—Helen Doyle, serving a 25-year sentence in the Pennsylvania penitentiary for the abduction of a young boy, today opposed a pardon for her husband, who is now in the penitentiary for the same crime. She said that she would make a movie of the case, and that she would make a movie of the case.

At the outset she was confronted with a charge from the board of pardons here today by her attorney, Mr. J. M. Mulvihill.

Mr. Mulvihill did not minimize the crime, saying that the "people were frenzied over it and my defense would have been overruled and there was a popular demand for the extreme penalty. He thought a pardon was a 22-year old girl was out of all reason. The attorney cited that the girl had been in the hospital twice recently and this, interestingly, was the only time she was in the hospital. The physician's certificate he presented to sustain that.

"She admits her guilt," continued Mr. Mulvihill, "but promises to amend."

There was no opposition to the pardon, the present district attorney and Judge not caring to do anything, and Attorney Cochran, who presented the case, declined to do anything. The case, which was heard by Mr. Whitla, father of the kidnapped boy.

The members of the board questioned Mr. Mulvihill closely, drawing out the story of the crime and the girl's conduct. The case was heard by Mr. Whitla, father of the kidnapped boy.

P. & L. E. SPENDS BIG SUM ON YARDS
AT DICKERSON RUN*Improvements are Believed to Presage a Traffic Boom.*NEW TRACKS ARE BEING LAID*Company Will Also Replace Wooden Trestle at Broad Ford With a Steel
Span; Lots of Coke Being Delivered
Over the Summit Transfer Just Now

Activity along various lines by the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie railroad at Dickerson Run seems to presage a boom in business, which has been steadily getting better for some time past. A new east-main track next to the hill is being laid and two work trains in charge of G. Danaher and W. Danaher are busy at work making the necessary grades and fills. The track runs through the foundation of the old scale house where a work train with a force of 100 men is on the job, cutting away the dump, to connect the track with the old east-main track south of the new scales. Just east of this point it will connect with the "short line" leading to the old scale yard west and to the recently laid yard east of the depot, then connecting to No. 4 track, and following it to Port Hill where it works up with the original east main track.

A larger force is also at work under Foreman J. A. Cole grading in the east yard, where a tool house and the car inspectors' and steam maintenance supply houses will have to be moved to make room. New telegraph poles 50 feet high have been placed along this track, which will raise the wires high enough to clear the new depot and the Dawson bridge when it is raised.

It has been asked or a new viaduct which will span Dickerson run, starting from the state road at J. E. Black's store and connecting with the bridge west of the old depot, which crosses Dickerson run branch.

Coke trade is picking up. The last three weeks' business over the Summit transfer has shown a decided increase. The Pennsylvania delivers the coke to this transfer from the Westmoreland field and from there it is hauled to Dickerson Run, weighed and carried west.

Another big improvement will be the replacing of the wooden trestle at Broad Ford with a concrete and steel bridge. Three large sections of steel girders have been in the Dickerson Run yards for four weeks, ready to be put in place as soon as the concrete piers are completed. A large force of carpenters and concrete men, aided by a power pile driver, are at work on this job.

There is a decree of appreciation on the part of the citizens of Connellville universally and the city council has passed a resolution expressing the appreciation of the citizens of the city of Connellville to the city of Connellville in the name of the city of Connellville.

East End Store Is Broken Into and Robbers Make Good Hunt; Notes.

MT. PLEASANT, June 22.—Very impressive and beautiful were the services held from the St. Joseph's school when the senior class graduated on Monday. The procession formed in the school and marched into the church, each graduate having an attendant who had been a previous graduate. The students carried bouquets of red roses and formed an arch of these while the graduates passed under this arch to get their diplomas. The exercises opened with singing of "Gloria Holi Ghost." Next came a most excellent address by the Rev. Father Mackett. This was followed by a solo sung by Miss Agnes Murray, assisted by a large chorus. The distribution of the diplomas was made to the following graduates: John Donnelly, James Logan, Sara Jackson, Mattie Granger and Catharine Madden. The graduates and the seventh grade sang a very pretty hymn, and this was followed by distribution of medals as follows: to John Donnelly went the Catechism prize, the highest average prize and he also had the distinction of being the honor student and being a perfect attendance student. The eighth grade medal went to Mattie Granger, seventh grade to Henry Granger, sixth to Paul Granger, fifth to Agnes Hamacher, fourth to Cecilia Madden, third to Mary Plannigan, second to Cecilia Hamilton and first to Paul Donnelly. Books were given to 75 for perfect attendance during the term. Previous to the benediction came the closing chorus by the Senior Society which made up of a chorus of 150 voices.

Mrs. Gifford of New Jersey will speak in the Grand Opera House on Friday evening against Woman's Suffrage. She is a famous anti.

Mrs. Kirk Hays and Mrs. M. W. Horner gave a merry soiree party to eighteen little friends of their daughters Miss Betty Hays and Jane Horner, who both celebrated their third birthdays yesterday. Following the merry soiree ride on the Merry Go Round at the Spiller park very nice refreshments were served.

Nellie Overly, the year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Overly, died yesterday morning at the Bridgeport street home. Funeral services will be held this afternoon and interment made in the local cemetery.

The Senior Society of St. Joseph's Church will hold a lawn party and refreshments at St. Joseph's Church this evening.

The men who are trying to urge the organization of a camp of Sons of Veterans in this town held a meeting in the I. O. O. F. hall last evening. T. O. Anderson is acting chairman, J. H. Zuck is acting secretary. The chair is still open and a large number of men are signing up.

The various committees of the Hook & Ladder held a meeting and announced a dance for the Slavish hall on Saturday evening, July 3, with Gumbles six piece orchestra. They have set a price at 25 cents for ladies and 50 cents for men. Some time on Saturday evening the Boston Store in the east end of town was entered and watches, suitcases, clothes and underwear to the amount of $100 was taken. Mr. Zeckhauser is the proprietor of the store and had a good clue which the state police are using in an effort to locate the thieves. Yesterday morning an Elmer Huffman was driving from Bur's automobile down Main street it skidded and he threw on the brakes only to have it turn turtle for him. The top of the car was damaged and the fenders bent.

WITH SELF-TRIMMING.

All the dainty ruffles which militarily adorned last year, and which were deprived her of more than half of her feminine charm, are re-established in favor. Many of the thin summer frocks have self-trimming as only trimming, as in the case of the gown shown here. This was of dainty voile in pompadour design and made with a similar blouse, having ruffles placed in the outline of broad tabs over each shoulder. On the skirt the ruffles formed deep scallops above a single ruffle which bounds the hem.

Melancholy Women.
Women should understand that melancholy, commonly called the "Blues," is in nine times out of ten a pure symptom of some organic derangement which should have attention. For nearly forty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for such conditions, as proved by many testimonials which we are constantly publishing from women who have been restored to health by its use.—Adv.

THE FULL CROW LAW.

It is pointless to discuss the Governor's repeal of the Full Crow law, for the repeal of the law is a fact, and it is noteworthy. It takes the railroad somewhat to task for representing that the law imposed a great army of unnecessary employees on the railroad companies, when he declares that as a matter of fact it imposed but one man. "As a matter of fact there is only one additional employee required by the law," he says. "This is a very ingenious statement."

The Governor further states that the railroads got their 5% freight increase because of the Full Crow law. This is absurd. "This law only applied in Pennsylvania and New Jersey. The railroads based their claim to the 5% freight increase on the ground that they had made two advances in wages with the full understanding with the Government when the last one was made that it would be compensated for by increased freight rates. It is true that the added cost of the extra man imposed by the Full Crow law was also presented in support of the railroad case, but this was only incidental to the situation in two states. The Full Crow bill was not a political question, but the Governor evidently thinks it is a political question so far as he is concerned to stay on the train with the trainmen."

FORGET IT, MARTIN.

Governor Brumbaugh perhaps has a right to play politics, but when the Democratic organs call it independence of thought and action we must be excused if we are indignant.

The present independence of the same character which prompted him to kick by himself in the late campaign. That was his right, and no body objected seriously to it, though it looked rather selfish to say the least. The results of that campaign indicated that Martin was unduly apprehensive when he feared the continuation of Republican association. Senator Penrose was no millionaires about anybody's neck last fall.

It is unfortunate that the Republicans have elected a Governor who has conceived that he is a bigger man than his party, but the Republican party has survived worse calamities, and the Republicans are not going to let a little thing like this worry them in the face of the larger duties which confront them in 1916.

If Martin won't forget it, we will have to forget Martin.

Our foreign friends are inclined to fight it out in this peaceful country every now and then to the great benefit of the law and the freedom of the press. The Committee on the European fighting must be done in Europe.

The Kaiser is in the saddle.

The Uniontown New Freedom Standard characteristic modesty remarks: "The New Standard complained bitterly against the election bills, and kind friends were careful to send the Governor copies of these protests." Now we know why the Governor vetoed the election bills.

The Good Old Summer Time is officially here.

Every time we launch a battleship there is a commotion over the manner of its christening, whether it be wet or dry. The whole ceremony might be omitted without injury to the navy.

The Fayette county speedways are being prepared for the summer races.

The demonstrations against the life of the Governor of Georgia because he has committed the sentence of Frank from death to imprisonment for life prove how strong the prejudice in the case and confirm the general opinion that Frank was unjustly convicted.

The next meeting of the Fayette county farmers will be a strictly family affair.

"Drink all you want to, but be careful how you get it." Is the rule in West Virginia. Drinking liquor constitutes a felony in that state unless the intricate forms of the law are carefully observed. It's better to drink water and be safe.

The arrival of the band concerts in the final evidence that summer has come.

The Bureau of Mines declares that it is making explosives for the Allies. The dentist was hurriedly necessary. The story was about on its face.

The request of the H. & O. management that it be permitted to stay out of baseball pools suggests that if this form of gambling has attained such importance it is time the city fathers were running it to earth.

Martin seems to have a bad case of Presidential fever.

It seems to be the fashion for stylish bachelors to go to the Connelville establishment. To the merchants this is a delicate but undisturbable matter.

The foreign dog law has done more to stimulate American citizenship than any recent cause, but the citizenship that is founded on the family dog is not of the most desirable character.

The Full Crow bill puts a brakeman in the middle of the train where he is more likely to meet death than any place else.

Under the Dome

Special to The Courier.

ASHINGTON, D. C., June 22.—The state of the Treasury has created a state of mind in administrative circles. The balance in the general fund was down below 11 millions, and is now just over 20 millions, as against nearly 145 millions a year ago, and the deficit at the present moment is about 130 millions. And this despite the fact that a "war tax" of 105 millions was levied last fall to meet a loss in customs receipts which actual results now show to be less than 40 millions. To this 65 millions of extra revenue from the "war tax" levied in a time of peace must be added more than 12 millions received from the sale of battleships to the Greek Government. And yet, with nearly 80 millions of extra revenue, the Treasury shows a deficit of nearly 130 millions.

What has become of the money? The item of expenditure which has hitherto been carefully concealed by a clever system of bookkeeping is the money paid by the Department of Justice to favored attorneys who have been specially retained to do the work which the Attorney General's office would seem to be sufficiently manned and paid to do itself.

The Attorney General receives $12,000 a year for his services. His regular force of assistant attorneys is a solicitor general drawing $9,000, six assistant attorneys general drawing $7,000 each. There are solicitors, ranging from $3,000 to $5,000 for every department, including the Treasury Department, and scores of assistants who defend claims against the United States.

And yet the Democratic Congress appropriated $600,000 for the employment of special attorneys. These extra counsel fees run into hundreds of thousands, and the list of beneficiaries is illuminating. For instance, Jesse C. Adams, engaged to prosecute the American Can Company, and the Corn Products Company, received a salary of $5,000; H. L. Brown in the United Gas Improvement investigation, $5,000; Henry E. Colon in the United States Steel Corporation case, $5,000; J. W. Carr in the United Gas Improvement case, $5,000; Edwin W. Groves in the Harvester Company case, $3,000; "Ben" Neumann, J. M. Dickinson, in the Street Car Company suit, $7,500. Aside from these men there are forty-five other special assistants, some working in Washington and some in the offices of the district attorneys in various large cities, all drawing from about $1,500 a year to $1,000 a year. That is to say, there are more than fifty lawyers paid for extra work in enforcing the anti-trust laws.

In addition there are five lawyers paid out of the lump appropriation for the prosecution of suits affecting title to Seminoles allotted lands in Oklahoma, seven more paid out of the funds for the prosecution of suits affecting Pacific railroads, and finally seventy-six fore paid out of an appropriation devoted to providing for special assistants to the Attorney General and special attorneys for the various districts where important cases require extra and exclusive services. In this list are men who draw as much as $12,000 a year.

And yet the Democratic Platform of 1912 demanded "a return to that simplicity and economy which befits a democratic government," provided for a reduction in the number of useless offices, the salaries of which drain the substance of the people.

Willington's selection of secretaries fairly to bolster up their tottering cause is one of the characteristics of the present National administration. One of the most notable instances of this is the selection of Secretary Redfield of the Department of Commerce in a public letter to Senator Stone, of Missouri, used statistics for April 1911, in a discussion of trade balance, in which he endeavored to explain that the balance of $11,000,000 against the United States was due to the increase in imported foodstuffs arising from our own alleged shortage and to the increase of imports of crude materials needed for our manufactures. He also endeavored to maintain that the balance of trade against us for that month was due in part to decrease in exports of foodstuffs, and of such materials as coal and raw cotton. He dismissed the rest of the period under the Democratic tariff as not worth considering.

A fair presentation of statistics relating to the balance of trade in favor of or against the United States would have included a period prior to the taking effect of the Underwood tariff law, and all of the period subsequent thereto up to the time of the beginning of the European war on July 21, in October, 1913, when the Underwood-Simmons tariff law went into effect, the balance of trade in our favor amounted to $139,000,000; in November it dropped to $97,000,000; in December, $49,000,000; January, 1914, $19,000,000; dropped to $25,000,000 in February; to $1,700,000 in March, while in April, 1914, the balance was against us to the amount of $11,000,000. The balance of trade continued against the United States every month thereafter. Not until September, when war orders began to come in, were we again to the good in our balance of trade.

Secretary McAdoo comes forward with the remarkable declaration that it would be a great advantage to this nation if politics could be eliminated from the ship question, so that we could "deal with this important matter dispassionately." Who put the Ship Purchase bill into politics? President Wilson insisted that it be made a party measure and at his command the Democrats cautioned on the ship-purchase bill, and these Senators who refused to be bound were read out of the party by Senator Bill Stone. The Republican filibuster defeated this proposition for Government ownership of ships, and the pending Senate closure rule which, if it could be adopted, would destroy the last revenge of the minority, the interned vessels of the bolliveria, on which, it was rumored, certain Democrats had a private business eye, are snugly moored in our ports.

Senator Ollie James returns from his Hawaiian Odyssey with glad tidings of the acute political sentiment in California for re-election of President Wilson, and predicts the same by a big vote. Senator James was chairman of the Democratic Convention at Baltimore, 1912, when the single term presidential plank was placed in the platform which "put molasses to catch flies." The Senator declares that the estimates of the Department of Agriculture are away off, and promises bumper crops for 1915, probably a result of Democratic administration. Senator James declared that free sugar would save every householder 2 cents upon every pound of sugar. This is mentioned as an example of his failure as a prophet.

Will Hold Examination. An examination for teachers' provisional certificates will be held at Normalville tomorrow by John S. Carroll, county superintendent of schools.

John Gutenberg

By GEORGE FITCH, Author of "At Good Old Stew."

John Gutenberg was born within sight of the Rhine at Mainz in 1400. His parents were humble, but in politics they were expelled from Mainz during a change of administration in 1420, and went to Strasbourg.

This was a great misadventure as Florence made when she gave Dante twenty-four hours in which to get out of town. Gutenberg became the father of printing, the greatest of all modern powers. But he never went back to Mainz and the home folks brag about their illustrious citizen. He was invited to come back and live, but he refused, and he found himself for debt whenever he found them in Strasbourg.

Gutenberg received the honor posthumously. For ten years he wandered around Southern Germany borrowing small amounts here and there, and putting them into the business and in 1455 he found his first copy of the Gutenberg Bible, and put the next edition on sale.

This produced an enormous sensation, and it has been growing ever since. In a very few years, printing shops were running all over Europe and ten thousand monks who had been busy with their hands were finding new jobs, but this didn't do Gutenberg any good. His shop lost money. His creditors took it away from him and he died in 1468, poor and almost forgotten. One copy of the Gutenberg Bible is worth enough today to place thirty being beyond the dreams of avarice, but it is too late for him to appreciate this. All we can do for him is to erect monuments to the memory of the most useful get-rich-quick man the world ever had.

A special session of the Art Embroidery Club was held today at the home of Dr. Artie Smith new wife, Mrs. Tifford Motts is currier for Miss Fawn Lippincott's rubber tree while spending the day in Dittown. Miss Fawn Lippincott says she likes to tramp around in a recent store course and she won't see anything she can't buy. Stew Nugent, who dropped in on his mother for repairs, Saturday, has decided to leave. It's surprising how cheap you can find these days if you'll cut out the 'Victory' and 'auto' and 'jimmy' the other.

SUPREME COURT'S DECISION SETTLES FAMOUS DEBT CASE

West Virginia Must Pay Its Share of Big Obliga- tion.

INTEREST IS A BIG ITEM

This Alone Amounts to $8,178,307.
Making Total Amount Due Old
Virginia $12,352,929; How West Virginia Will Settle Is the Question.

A long-standing legal controversy has been finally disposed of by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Virginia debt case. This case arose out of the separation of West Virginia from Virginia during the Civil War, the former state being admitted to the Union on June 20, 1863. When the western part of the old state applied for admission to the Union, it was required to assume the debt of the old state, which was a large outstanding indebtedness which had been incurred in part to provide for the development of the western part. It was provided in the Constitution of the new State of West Virginia that it should assume an equitable share of the bonded debt, but the amount of that share was never determined, and the whole burden continued to be borne by Virginia.

On March 20, 1871, Virginia, assuming that the equitable share of West Virginia was one-third, passed an act authorizing an exchange of the outstanding bonds, etc., and providing for the funding of two-thirds of the debt with interest accrued to July 1, 1871, by the issue of new bonds bearing the same rate of interest as the old ones. There were to be issued at the same time for the other one-third certificates of the same debt setting forth the amount of the old bond that was not funded, that payment thereof with interest at the rate prescribed in the old bond would be provided for in accordance with such settlement as should be had between Virginia and West Virginia in regard to the public debt, and that Virginia held the old bonds in trust for the holder or his assignee.

A new refunding act was passed in 1872 reducing the interest and providing that Virginia would negotiate or aid in negotiating with West Virginia for the settlement of claims of certificate holders, and that the acceptance of the offer for West Virginia's one-third under the act would be an absolute release of Virginia from all liability on account of the same. In 1893 a commission was appointed to negotiate with West Virginia when satisfied that a majority of the certificate holders desired it, and would accept the amount to be paid by West Virginia in full settlement of the one-third that Virginia had not assumed. On March 6, 1899, the Virginia legislature passed an act authorizing the commission to receive and take on deposit the certificates upon a contract that the certificate holders would accept the amount tendered from West Virginia in full settlement of all their claims under the same, and further authorized it to certify that the certificates should be so deposited. Six years later the commission reported that it had received assents of the certificate holders, several efforts were made at one time or another to bring about a settlement, but they all proved fruitless.

Finally Virginia brought suit in the Supreme Court of the United States to recover about one-third of the debt of the old state as it existed on January 1, 1861, when the whole amount of the debt was computed to be over $12,000,000. The Supreme Court appointed the late Congressman Charles Field of Maine an special master to ascertain the amount of the state debt on that date, and to pass upon several points which West Virginia's proposition should be computed. A report was submitted in 1910, and in March of the following year the Supreme Court rendered a decision based upon Littlefield's findings. In reaching its conclusion the court took the ratio of valuation of the real and personal property of the two states at the time of their separation as forming the proper basis for arriving at West Virginia's just and equitable proportion of the debt. From this computation the value of slaves was excluded. The resulting ratio calculated on this basis was .765 to .235, and the debt of $12,000,000 would have been divided on this basis had not Virginia by subsequent legislation changed the amount to be proportioned. That state had induced its creditors to accept $25,597,842.15 as its share of the debt, whereas by the figures upon which the court relied its share should have been $25,231,261.47. The difference between these two sums should, the court held, be subtracted from the total above given, leaving in round numbers $20,662,551.46 to be apportioned, and of this $7,192,507.16 would be West Virginia's proportion.

In the decision in 1911, the court said there was still room for a wide divergence of opinion in relation to such questions as whether any interest was due, and if due from what time it should be allowed and at what rate it should be computed. These questions were dealt with in the decision just rendered, together with the further one as to the right of West Virginia to share in Virginia's uncollected assets. In passing upon the plan of the controversy the Supreme Court now allows West Virginia the deduction of $2,266,845 as her share of the assets of the old state from the amount due by the prior decision as her proportion of the debt, thus reducing the amount of the latter to $4,215,622. The court, on the other hand, decides that West Virginia should pay interest on this amount, and fixes the rate at 4 per cent from January 1, 1861, to July 1, 1871, which totals up $7,133,029, and at 2 per cent from the latter date to July 1, 1915, making $1,925,218, or a total of $9,058,247 for interest alone. The item added to the amount of the debt makes a total of $12,352,929.

Interest now centers in the method to be followed by West Virginia in making the settlement indicated by the court's opinion.

HARRISBURG WOMAN FINDS QUICK RELIEF

Mary Wheeler Gains in Weight After Taking Wonderful Remedy.

Mary Wheeler of 706 Green street, Harrisburg, Pa., for a long time was a victim of stomach disorders. She tried many treatments and found nothing that could help her.

At last she came upon May's Wonderful Remedy and quickly found herself on the way to health. She wrote:

"I received your wonderful stomach remedy. I took it and it acted just as you said it would. I had suffered with my stomach for nearly a year and doctored all the time. The first dose of your treatment gave me relief. I feel like now, I had awful distress after eating and suffered from bloating and gas, but now I feel fine, am gaining in weight and can eat anything."

May's Wonderful Remedy gives permanent results for stomach, liver and intestinal ailments. Eat as much and whatever you like. No more distress after eating, pressure of gas in the stomach and around the heart. Get one bottle of your druggist now and try it on an absolute guarantee. If not satisfactory money will be returned.

SICK SKINS MADE WELL BY RESINOL

No matter how long you have been tormented and disfigured by itching, burning, raw or scaly skin humors, just use a little of that soothing, antiseptic Resinol Ointment on the sores. The suffering usually stops right there! Healing begins that very minute, and in almost every case your skin gets well so quickly you feel ashamed of the money you threw away on tedious, useless treatments.

Resinol Ointment is not an experiment. It is a doctor's prescription which proved so wonderfully successful for skin troubles all over the country for twenty years. No other treatment for the skin now before the public can show such a record of professional approval. Every druggist sells Resinol Ointment (50c and $1.00), and Resinol Soap (25c). They do wonders for pimples, blackheads, dandruff and chafings, and are a comfort to skin-tortured babies.

SMITHFIELD.

SMITHFIELD, June 22.—L. G. Charpening and wife of Uniontown were the guests of relatives in the borough over Saturday night and Sunday.

H. O. Nell and wife met Mrs. T. R. Lynch of Fairbank on No. 22 Sunday and accompanied her to Point Marion where they called on Mr. and Mrs. Charles O'Neil and their new baby boy.

Reuben McCann brought suit before Judge Mitchell of Fairbank against Thomas Klinghouse for shooting one of his chickens that was trespassing on Klinghouse's property.

The Justice allowed McCann $500 for the chicken with an additional amount of costs of $100. In view of the fact that it has been held by the courts that in a perfectly clear case where the person who shot the chicken, after a trial, was found to be the owner of them that he would shoot them unless they were kept off his land, could not be completed of unlawfully killing the chicken. This was a pretty serious sentence, by the court of limited jurisdiction.

Margaret Tallentire, Ella Pegg and Nancy Pegg, of Uniontown and Katharine Hendrix, of Smithfield, arrived here at 8:25 Sunday morning on a bike from Uniontown to Morgan town, W. Va., they returned from Morgantown on No. 22.

These are girls on a previous occasion, walked from Uniontown to Conneltsville and return.

Mrs. T. P. Hartman visited friends at Chest-Haven Sunday.

Clarence Jones and wife visited relatives at Little Falls over Saturday and Sunday.

Samuel Whitstone and wife were Point Marion visitors over Saturday night and Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. O'Neil visited Mr. and Mrs. Johnathan Moody at Collier Sunday.

Ed. D. Ramsey and Janus Wentworth were business visitors at Uniontown Saturday.

The Baptist and M. E. Sunday schools held their children's day exercises Sunday evening. Each carried out a well arranged program in a pleasing manner.

WILSON TO REST.

Prepares to Leave for Summer "White House" on Wednesday.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Preparations for opening of the summer White House at Cornish, N. H., were begun today in anticipation of the arrival of President Wilson. The President will go to Cornish by way of New York to see Colonel T. M. House, his personal friend, who recently returned from Europe.

By present plans he will leave here Wednesday and spend Thursday in New York with Colonel House.

OPPORTUNITY

Is a Good Word; This is Opportunity.

The writer spent many of his boyhood days in this vicinity and his mission here this week is to get a rest, meet old friends, also to speak to them about Opportunity. Without opportunity life is a failure financially. Energy, education and ability count for nothing without opportunity. Now I say this to all working men, merchants, machinists and mill men who are considering on moving from this vicinity and want to get transplanted elsewhere, the writer will tell you of his experience leaving this vicinity and looking for opportunity from ocean to ocean to better his condition financially and otherwise. Men, I believe I can tell you of opportunity for workingmen, merchants and mechanics and for the investors. Men, it is the Monongahela Valley. Not one point or place in the Valley, but for miles and miles. Men, I can tell you of new steel mills that are going up now. Men, I can tell you where a second Altoona railroad town is coming on the map; is building now, in this valley, the Valley of Opportunity. Men, this information is perhaps worth more to you than to the writer if you are looking for a new location and good opportunity. It cost money to look the United States over and look for opportunity. I have gone through this. Men, if you are doing well here in making a good living, don't move, stay here and say you are satisfied. Moving may be a mistake. But if you want to earn your lot where hard work and energy and ability has opportunity I will tell you the truth about the Valley, the Valley of Opportunity. The writer can be met at the Smith House Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings of this week from 7 until 11 o'clock P. M.

I have nothing to sell you. Just want to tell you of Opportunity.

My name is A. S. Snyder, my residence Wilson, Pa., in the Monongahela Valley, the Valley of Opportunity.

LACKAWANNA LEADS IN PRODUCTION OF BENZOL IN THE U. S.

Supplies the Demand of Allies for High Explosive Material.

IN ON THE GROUND FLOOR

Big Steel Company Early Recognized
Demand There Would be for Benzol and Toluol, and Proceeded to Get a Quarter-Year Start Over Others.

Turning out thousands of gallons of crude benzol per day, at Lackawanna Steel Company is the greatest single agency in the world in supplying the demands of the allies for the vital product of high explosives.

The Lackawanna has now doubled its huge new plant for the production of crude benzol, while none of the other big steel companies which has decided to enter the field on a large scale yet has its plant started.
Apparently the Lackawanna has a quarter-year lead in the manufacture having recognized the importance which the product would assume and having begun construction in a very short period after the beginning of the European conflict. It is now getting the benefit of prices for crude benzol 50 per cent greater than were paid for the product ten months ago.

Meanwhile, the prices continue to soar because of the serious position of the Russian forces through lack of high explosives and the fact that the British and French War Offices are piling up their orders for such explosives at frantic speed preparatory to beginning the campaign for the tearing of a way through the long line of German trenches on the western front.

The most serious of the criticisms hurled at Lord Kitchener recently, was the lack of high explosives for the western campaign. The answer given was that the manufacture of crude benzol on a great scale previous to the war had been mostly in the hands of Germany, and that it had been necessary to start new factories all over the world to meet the allies' unprecedented demands, a condition involving serious loss of time.

The first unit of the Lackawanna plant was completed a month ahead of time, and the completion of the second unit is also ahead of schedule. The plant is at Buffalo and the crude benzol manufactured there is sent to the Harbort Manufacturing Company at Elmford, Pa., which refines it into benzol and toluol.
All the phenol of the first unit is being sold to the French government, negotiations having been concluded whereby the company is to turn over to that government a minimum of 1,200,000 pounds for the six months period ending Jan. 15. All the total of that unit is being sold to J. F. Morgan & Co., for the use of the British government. It is this total which is the all-powerful ingredient of battle
the chief dependence of the British War Office in high explosives.

All the total of the second unit of the plant is sold to a Canadian company which is handling ammunition orders totaling several millions of dollars, placed presumably from the French. The crude benzol from this second plant is being sold spot. War agents of various countries, and the agents of the various great powder plants of the United States and Canada are piling up orders for the product in building for this portion, and have arrayed against them in the competition the agents of the day workers whose need for the product is urgent because of the continued demands for soldier uniforms for the allied armies, as well as the domestic demands of the textile trade. The crude benzol produced by the Lackawanna plant is taken out in a masterly way. The total is taken out, and finds its way into high explosives when turned into phenol and similar products.

Some idea of the enormous profits to be gathered under such conditions may be had from the fact that crude benzol, as a by-product of the Lackawanna Steel Company, is taken from what was formerly the waste, coke smoke, Coke is one of the principal products of the company—unlike the condition prevailing with several of the other leading steel companies of the United States and Canada, the smaller concerns which have grown in mush-room fashion to meet the demands for benzol are laboring under the far higher expense of turning out their crude benzol from gas.

ANOTHER STACK STARTS.
Pittsburgh Steel Company Increases
Big Iron Output.

The Pittsburgh Steel Company, which has blown its second blast furnace stack at Monaca, is negotiating quickly for about 20,000 tons a month of second half furnace coke.
Several weeks ago, it will be recalled, the company placed a contract for coke requirements for No. 1 blast furnace. It is probable that No. 2 stack will be furnished by the same interest.

The Scisson

"ALICE IN WONDERLAND."
The charming young actress Miss Vida Savoy appears today in a fine production of that immortal dream of childhood, "Alice in Wonderland." It is unlikely that any motion picture showing has ever given as much pleasure to the children and big folk as well as has "Alice in Wonderland."
It is simply irresistible. King Haggart will also appear today in the thrilling, two reel Imp drama, "Life in the Islands." It is an exciting play.
Little Mary Fuller is the star in the Victor drama, "The Judgment of Men." The Nestor comedy, "When They Were Comedians," is a jolly colorful play that is rampant with fun. Tomorrow, the well known actress Maria Jacobs in the sensational live reel drama, "The Colored Game," showing the underworld of Paris.

The Colonial

"Pretty Mrs. Smith," a charming comedy-drama starring Ethel Scheff,
the initial release of "The Moroccan Photoplay Company," will be shown at the Colonial Theatre today.
matinee and night. Anyone who has never heard the heather page, nor seen them all about the drama cutting their simple ropes, may now do so.
For Mrs. Smith's first husband was a missionary and took her to just such scenes. By quick chance, Mrs.
Smith is at a great reception where she meets her second husband. Then follow scenes of life in a cottage. A supposed suicide ends this colorless episode, and Mrs. Smith is soon the wife of a millionaire, with all the privileges incident to that life. Anything, however sweet, after a time, grows tiresome, and so did the millionaire husband. "Pretty Mrs.
Smith" knows how to meet such extremes, and the last act finds her surrounded by three husbands, all alive and well, in the beautiful Alexandria Hotel lobby. Such diversity of scenes, with artistic direction and superb photography, must result in a picture of absorbing interest, and this is the case with "Pretty Mrs. Smith," which no one should miss seeing.

The Globe

The first episode of "The Goddess,"
a serial production featuring Anita Stewart and Earl Williams, will be shown Wednesday, July 7, at the Globe. The picture is one of unusual interest and is meeting with wonderful success. The feature attraction today is the third part of "Heart O' Strife," "The Silver Cup," presenting Mary Charleston and Crane Wilbur.
The picture, one of the best of the season, featuring Helen Holmes,
"Snap Shots," an Edison comedy, and "Sage Brush," concludes the bill today. Tomorrow's bill includes
"A Million of Plans," a Vitaphone
drama, presenting Norma Talmadge;
"The Human Investment," featuring
Anna Hawley and Earl Metcalf;
"Willie Whipples Drum," a Kalem comedy, "The Captivation of the Major," with Lillian Walker, and
"The House of Another Color," an Edison drama. Record breaking crowds saw Charles Chaplin yesterday in "By the Sea," one of his latest comedy successes.

The Arcade

Three enthusiastic audiences greeted the Fred Barbeau Musical Comedy Company at the Arcade yesterday,
and from the many comments heard about the performance given by the Barbeau family capacity houses will no doubt be the result at this theatre for the remainder of their engagement. Fred Barbeau is a whole show by himself and looks after the comedy portion of the bill in a masterly way. The feminine contingent of the troupe are in a class by themselves,
being pretty, talented and full of enthusiasm. The show closes with a number of classical selections played by the Barbeau Family Concert Band, introducing several soloists as well as the smallest band director in the world.

AFTER PITTSBURGH COAL

South American Business May Helieve
Dull Trade.

Intensive coal operators in Western Pennsylvania are receiving numerous inquiries for shipment to South America. An order for 1,000 tons of Youghiogheny coal, cut a day, previously reported, is being filled by one of the more prominent coal operators in this district. Several cargoes of coke for smelters have been shipped to South American countries.

The domestic market shows no improvement. Prices of all grades are weak and irregular. While some new demand is reported, there has not been enough selling to enable dealers to establish higher prices. Stock is being offered in some instances at less than 60 cents a ton. Time run is selling at about $11 a ton and even this figure has been shown in a number of instances. The three-quarter inch coal is quotable at about $1.10 a ton and 1 1/4 inch is commanding about $1.25 a ton for prompt delivery. Circular prices furnished by some coal interests are from 10 to 20 cents a ton higher than these figures.

MAY BUY WORKS.

Diamond State Steel Works May Be Sold to Schwab and Others.

It is learned that Charles M. Schwab and associates in the Bethlehem Steel Company are negotiating for the old Diamond State Steel works at Wilmington, Del., and the deal will be closed soon.
The plant has been idle for a number of years. It consists of an open-hearth works, including bar mills. It is not known for what purpose this property is desired by the probable purchasers.

Weber Male Quartet

THE Weber Male Quartet is in every sense a high class organization, composed of four of the well known concert and chorus soloists of New York city. An association of several years in successful concert and photograph work has resulted in the beautiful blending, the clearness of enunciation and the artistic distinction which are the essentials of a really satisfactory quartet. The Weber Male Quartet is progressive in adding to its repertoire, and its versatility and artistic bearing have been unfailingly successful wherever it has appeared. The personnel of the Weber Male Quartet is likewise unique in that each man is a musician as well as a slugger. The quartet will appear on all Redpath-Brookway Chautauques during the coming season.

HERRING FISHERS NOW FISH MINES

Hundreds of British Trawlers
Are Sweeping Seas.

WORK IN DEADLIEST PERIL.

Two Little Vessels Drag Cables Between Them Just as if They Were Fishing Net.

Fishing boats from Hull, Yarmouth
and the whole west coast of England are being used as mine sweepers in the Dardanelles, as well as in the North Sea, along the various coasts of the "war zone" and in other places where the Germans have strewn the seas
with the deadly mines.

It has been frequently reported in England that during the days just before the war the Kingdom Louise, an immaculate looking merchant vessel flying a German flag, which later was sunk at her task, was placing hundreds of mines in the North Sea, and when the war began the fishing industry practically came to an end for the time being.

There is a story that one boat took a chance and went out and came back with $10,000 worth of fish. This was practically the end of the fishing for fish. Following this came the call of the British admiralty, and then began the fishing for mines.

The Scottish ports have lost more than $2,500,000 since the war began.
In the case of Yarmouth, which is similar to that of all the other ports, only three cargoes of herrings were sent aboard in 1914 for the same period the year before, when that port exported 829,525 barrels.

The killing of the fishing industry left 100,000 of the best sailors in the world with nothing to do, and when the government called them they were only too ready. They volunteered by thousands, and hundreds of trawlers took to the sea.

Very Similar to Fishing.

The method of trawling for mines is very similar to that of fishing. The boats travel in pairs with a long cable between them. This drags along the bottom or near the bottom, and the sweepers with their practiced hands can tell by the feel when a mine has been caught. They then continue to go forward until the mine mooring breaks and it comes to the top.

The mines used by the Germans both in the North Sea and at the Dardanelles are charged with a combination of some of the most powerful explosives known. It is safe to say that the explosion of one charge of 300 pounds means the speedy end of the ship, as has been demonstrated at the Dardanelles.

When the head of the mine shows
above the water the trawler slows down. The next task is to get rid of it, and usually the fishermen open fire with their rifles and explode it. Often, however, they whistle for help, and the gunman destroyer, that usually watch es over them, responds, and a shot or two from her quick fires put the mine where it will never fulfill its mission of destruction.

At the Dardanelles the trawlers have been operating under fire that made even the battleships uncomfortable.
The fishermen, who have become fatalists from their long association with the sea, carry out their dangerous work with the utmost stoicism.

Work Ahead of Warships.

The great vessels of the allied navies, vessels like the famous Queen Elizabeth, hover about behind them, dropping shells where they will do the most harm, but waiting until the humble fishermen have cleared the way so that they may go in with comparative safety and do their work. But they must wait until the work is done properly and the channel is swept clear.

The men of the trawlers wear life belts and inflated rubber collars about at work, but there is small chance for them if their boats strike a mine. The explosion is so terrific that only a few splinters of what was once a staunch little vessel remain, and the men are usually blown to atoms.

One of the reasons that the steam trawlers are best adapted to this phase sweeping work is because they draw so little water. The mines are anchored so that they are about fifteen feet below the surface, and the fishing boats seldom draw more than six or seven.
The mine is placed so that it will explode among the vitals of the battleship, cruisers or merchantmen that are in the way. If they were a few feet below the surface their explosion might prove less deadly and their victims might be salvaged and escape.

The British government pays the mine sweepers well, and their families are provided for in case they die in the performance of their duty. The captains of the little vessels are officers of the royal naval reserve, and they serve under their own "submarine" just as they did in time of peace.

The "miners" are selected by the sweepers and are men who are beat quilted to lead in the pursuit of the fish, and now they lead in the search for mines, and their men follow with the same zeal and devotion to duty as they did when a good catch meant extra money at the end of the trip.

He Had Found His Specialty.
A London contemporary tells the following anecdote: A member of the bar not richly endowed with intellect after years of bloodiness married a rich widow. She died. Again he sought a "bride" with a large dowry and again became a widower. Then he thought he would return to his long neglected profession. He approached an old friend who had meanwhile become a judge of the supreme court and asked what, in his opinion, would be the wisest course for him to pursue. "Stick to the probate and matrimonial," said
the judge.

Quite So.

was largely a matter of time."—St.

LOVE in a HURRY

By GELETT BURGESS
ILLUSTRATED BY RAY WALTERS

Carolyn laughed; she was now thoroughly enjoying herself. "Well, then, I'm Carolyn Dallys," she volunteered. "I think you must be Miss Gale, aren't you? I've seen Hall's pictures of you, you know." Something suspicious in Rosamund's face impelled her to add mischievously, "And he's often spoken to me about you."

Rosamund showed her irritation at the patronizing air of familiarity only by the slightest flush. "Indeed," she said, "it's queer he hasn't told me about you."

"Oh, there's very little to tell." That was what Carolyn's lips said, but her whole face told a different story. In the woman's language of smiles she was an adept and Carolyn's smile was cruel.

It was now evident that, unless Rosamund could distinguish herself from the vast horde of Hall Bonistelle's female friends, she would expire of shame. Carolyn, without knowing exactly what caused the girl to suffer, was rejoicing in her lack of ease. She watched Rosamund grope for an effectual reply. At last it came with a proud toss of the blonde head and a flash of the golden brown eyes.

"Oh, I see," she said, "I didn't know by the way you spoke first, but perhaps you know him pretty well. Of course Hall and I are quite good friends, you know."

"Yes," Carolyn was more attentive. "Not that I've known him for such a long time, I don't mean, exactly; but—well, we're quite intimate."

Carolyn gave her a keen look, but did not show that she was particularly interested. "Really? Why, I rather understand," she said, "that you are interested in someone else."

"No," said Rosamund placidly. "Of course you understand, I have a right to know, you know."

"Well, no, Miss Gale, I don't know that I do," she said. "She drew herself up to Rosamund and sat down deliberately. "Would you mind telling me what particular right you have?" Carolyn, at last, had dropped her barrier. This was straight from the shoulder.

"Oh, I can hardly go into that," Rosamund said softly, satisfied by her victory.

Flodie, behind the shelter of the door, hugged herself in delight. Carolyn stared at the girl, puzzled. "Do you mean to tell me," she said finally, "that you are engaged to Hall Bonistelle?"

Rosamund stirred uneasily, and pouted. "Well, not exactly, that is. But I could be, if I wanted to."

"What?" Carolyn exclaimed. "Has he proposed to you?"

Rosamund nodded sedately. "He's waiting for my answer right now."

Carolyn jumped up excitedly, and was about to speak, when Flodie, smiling like a book agent, bustled into the room. She walked up to Carolyn. "Oh, here are your proofs, Miss Dallys," she said blithely. "I'm sorry I kept you waiting so long." She turned toward Rosamund. "Oh, I see you have met Miss Gale, so I don't need to introduce you."

"No," Carolyn answered, taking the proofs without looking at them. "Miss Gale and I have made ourselves acquainted, while we were waiting, thank you."

Flodie turned to Rosamund. "Miss Dallys is a very intimate friend of Mr. Bonistelle, you know."

All the starch went out of Rosamund's pose. "She is?" She gazed at Carolyn as at a rebel.

Carolyn shrugged her shoulders and gave a casual glance at the proofs. "Oh, Miss Fisher," she said, "would you mind printing another one of each of these two? I'd like to send them to my mother, and see which one she likes better." She handed them back to Flodie. "I'll wait," she added, her eyes on Rosamund.

Rosamund added, "I think I'll wait here a little while, too. Miss Fisher, Miss Dallys is really so very interesting."

Flodie smiled. "Well, all right, Miss Gale, I know you'd like her." And she disappeared.

Carolyn, who had been walking up and down impatiently, now approached Rosamund. "See here, Miss Gale," she said, "I'd like to know when Hall Bonistelle proposed to you."

"I fail to see how it is any of your business."

"Not well, then, I suppose I shall have to tell you. The fact is, Hall Bonistelle has just proposed to me."

"Why, Miss Dallys, you must be joking!" Rosamund stared, dumfounded. "Why, it was only this morning he spoke to me—"

"What time?"

"Why? Does the particular minute make any difference, I'd like to know, Miss Dallys?"

"But I never heard of such a thing in my life!" Poor Rosamund stared blankly at her rival.

"No," said Carolyn dryly, "it doesn't happen often, I hope; but there's no use in getting excited about it."

"Excited?" Do you mean to say you'd accept a man who had treated you like that?"

"No, Miss Gale, candidly, I wouldn't. And, between you and me, I don't mind telling you I wouldn't accept him like that."

"Oh, Lord, yes. I always call him Hall," Carolyn was beginning to be amused.

Rosamund tossed her head and crossed her feet, watching the newcomer sharply.

"Well," said Mrs. Royalty, primly, "I don't think that you know him so well, my dear!"

"Well, now I come to think of it, Renna, I don't know that I do know him quite so well as I thought, after all." She exchanged a smile with Rosamund, who laughed aloud, harshly, causing Mrs. Royalty to turn and stare at her.

"I'm afraid I fail to see the joke," she said haughtily. "But of course Hall Bonistelle isn't at all the sort of man one sees through at a glance, you know. He's deep; a very subtle person, in fact. However," she smiled complacently, "I flatter myself that I understand him a little better than I did."

Carolyn shot her a suspicious glance. "Why?" she demanded. "Made any recent discovery?"

Mrs. Royalty deliberately nodded up and down, and smiled cryptically.

"Oh, I don't know—I fancy he has something on his mind—in fact, I know he has—there's a—well, a sort of crisis—yes, I suppose he would appear a little excited—but of course I really have no business discussing it."

"What in the world are you talking about, Renna?" Carolyn exclaimed.

"Why, I'm talking about Hall Bonistelle, of course!"

"Well, you're not saying much."

"Never mind, Carolyn, dear, it isn't because I haven't anything to say! You don't expect me to go about repeating things he has said to me in confidence, do you?"

"Oh!" said Carolyn, narrowing her eyes, "then Hall has been confiding in you, too, has he?"

By this time Rosamund was hard on the seat, having almost caught up to Carolyn's suspicions. She said nothing, but her eyes were hot and shining, as she scrutinized Mrs. Royalty's face.

"See here," said Carolyn, now thoroughly interested. "I don't see why I haven't a right to know. I'm a pretty good friend of Hall's—you know that—and I think you ought to be able to trust me."

"Well, it isn't only trusting you—"

Mrs. Royalty looked significantly at Rosamund, suddenly listening.

"Well, I declare!" said Carolyn calmly. "Renna Royalty, either you're making an awful fool of yourself, or else Hall Bonistelle has actually—"

She got no further. Flodie, head up, with a busy air, bustled into the room, carrying a handful of prints. She stopped suddenly with a fine imitation of surprise, and gazed at Mrs. Royalty.

"Oh, Mrs. Royalty!" she exclaimed. "Why didn't you let me know you were here? I've got your proofs all ready for you. I think they are splendid!"

She handed them over, and approached Carolyn with two other proofs. "Here are yours, Miss Dallys. I'm sorry to have kept you waiting so long." She returned to Mrs. Royalty.

"Oh, how I dread to look at them!" that lady was saying. She was, now, orthodox, pursuing them hungrily.

Carolyn meanwhile had stridden across the room to Rosamund, and the two girls, conspired as Mrs. Royalty lost herself in her portraits.

"Oh, I don't like that one—"

"Really? . . . Why, I look a hundred years old! . . . There! That's more like me! . . . Which one do you like best, Miss Fisher? . . . No, do you? Why, I think it's awful. My eyes are so hard to take right, you don't get the soul in them, somehow. . . . Oh, I think I ought to try another sitting, don't you? . . . Say, where is Mr. Bonistelle, anyway?"

There came a ring at the telephone. Flodie jumped to snatch up the receiver.

CHAPTER VIII.

Mrs. Royalty, in an almost too-vivid shade of purple, was, in contrast to the two rather excited women, almost there, calm, cool and confident. Things were going very well with Renna Royalty; she had a man in her pocket. Renna was getting on; thirty-five had struck the warning bell; if she were going to be married again, why not now? Wasn't Hall Bonistelle handsome? Wasn't he well born and bred? Renna had thought him over, and decided to accept him. She entered, therefore, in a most becomingly amiable state of mind, lofty and somewhat detached.

To Carolyn she gave a smiling but suspicious, "Why, hello, Carolyn! You here?" and to Rosamund the quick, unconscious tribute due the natural blonde. Her eyes returned to Carolyn, a little troubled. "I didn't expect to see you again so soon, my dear!" she said.

Rosamund, meanwhile, was staring at the prototype of the portrait which had started the discussion of Hall's intimacies. Carolyn, noticing, introduced her. Rosamund, however, did not interest Renna Royalty so much as did Carolyn herself.

"Where is Mr. Bonistelle?" she asked.

"Oh, he's out—as usual," said Carolyn. "I expect Miss Fisher will attend to you, though."

Mrs. Royalty shrugged her shoulders. "Miss Fisher will hardly do for what I want," she said. "I'm afraid I'll have to see Mr. Bonistelle himself."

Rosamund frowned, but Carolyn only raised her eyebrows.

"Oh, well, I expect Hall will be back before long," said Carolyn.

Mrs. Royalty, placid as a cow, eyed her for a moment, then remarked slowly, meditatively, "You call him Hall, don't you? I hadn't known you were so intimate."

"Oh, Lord, yes. I always call him Hall," Carolyn was beginning to be amused.

Rosamund tossed her head and crossed her feet, watching the newcomer sharply.

"Well," said Mrs. Royalty, primly, "I don't think that you know him so well, my dear!"

"Well, now I come to think of it, Renna, I don't know that I do know him quite so well as I thought, after all." She exchanged a smile with Rosamund, who laughed aloud, harshly, causing Mrs. Royalty to turn and stare at her.

My eyes are so hard to take right, you don't get the soul in them, somehow. . . . Oh, I think I ought to try another sitting, don't you? . . . Say, where is Mr. Bonistelle, anyway?"

There came a ring at the telephone. Flodie jumped to snatch up the receiver.

Mrs. Royalty and Rosamund still sat as if entranced, but Carolyn Dallys rose impatiently now, and glanced about, as if in search of an excuse. The room was tensely charged with electricity. It was evident that in another minute the explosion must come. But, first, how to get rid of this important, busy little Miss Fisher?

Flodie herself answered the unvoiced question. Wasn't she as desirous as any of them to bring the thing to a head? Yes; so she must fly and leave the field of battle clear. Still smiling, she disappeared into the stockroom. She left the door ajar.

Mrs. Royalty rose, with a self-conscious smile. "Well, Carolyn," she said, "I suppose I'll have to tell you, now, it is most unfortunate that Miss Fisher wasn't more discreet in her conversation. But so long as she has let the cat out of the bag, I might as well inform you that the ring she was talking to Hall about is for this finger!"

She held up her left hand, her thumb pointing to her third finger.

Carolyn, with a whoop, fell into Rosamund's arms, and the two laughed until they cried.

Mrs. Royalty stared as if they had suddenly gone mad. Then she exclaimed angrily, "I'd like to know what there is to laugh at! I don't see anything particularly amusing in the fact that I'm going to marry Hall Bonistelle!"

"Oh, don't you?" Carolyn gurgled. "Miss Gale, do you see anything funny in it?"

"Funny! It's a scream!" Rosamund shouted with mirth. "Who'll be the next one?"

"Oh, the more the merrier!" cried Carolyn.

Renna Royalty drew herself up proudly. "I think you're exceedingly impudent!" she replied.

Carolyn dried her eyes on a lace handkerchief. "Renna," she said, still giggling, "I don't know whether it's too true to be funny, or too funny to be true. But you ought to be in on this joke, really, my dear. It will interest you strangely!"

"Well, I don't call it a joke. It's an outrage!" cried Rosamund.

"Say, Miss Gale," Carolyn turned confidentially, "d'you know, we ought really to form a society of the survivors, you know, Renna's the oldest, and we'll elect her president!"

Mrs. Royalty stared from one to the other, her temper rising. Finally she remarked cuttingly, "I must say, Carolyn, I always thought you were a lady!" and she walked swiftly toward the door.

"Oh, don't go yet!" Carolyn called out. "You've got a laugh coming to you, too, Renna. You haven't heard our news, yet!"

Mrs. Royalty trembled on the threshold. "Your news? What d'you mean?"

"Listen here," said Rosamund, walking over to her coolly. "Hall Bonistelle proposed to Miss Dallys at ten-thirty this morning, and he proposed to me at a quarter to eleven. Now, what time did he propose to you?"

Mrs. Royalty put out a hand trembling with appeal. "Carolyn!" she implored.

Carolyn nodded un sympathetically. Mrs. Royalty dropped into a chair, speechless, and burst into tears.

Carolyn walked up to her and laid a hand on the heaving purple shoulder. "Brace up," she said, "it won't hurt but a minute! See here, Renna, were you carried off your feet by his wild words, or did you take notice of the time?"

"Why—here this morning, Carolyn," Mrs. Royalty sobbed, "I left just before you came. It was—it was before that." Her tears poured forth afresh.

Carolyn nodded to Rosamund. "Make it ten-fifteen, then. I expect he proposes every quarter of an hour, rain or shine."

"But I don't see," said Rosamund, "if she accepted him, why he ever proposed to her!"

Mrs. Royalty looked up through big teary eyes. "Why," she said faintly, "you see, well I didn't give him a definite answer, really. That is, not exactly—I said—"

"She said she'd tell him later!" the two girls cried in unison, as if they had rehearsed it. "Tonight!" Rosamund added, and Carolyn, "Didn't you, Renna?"

Mrs. Royalty nodded tremulously. "How did you know?"

"Oh!" Carolyn shouted, "how did I know! Oh, I know, all right!" She blew a kiss to Rosamund. "You couldn't quite believe him, and so you couldn't decide. And you're to give him your answer tonight when you come to his unnatural old party! Is that right?"

"Well, he must have wanted me most, anyway," said Renna, drying her tears. "He proposed to me first!"

Carolyn held up her hand. "Second thoughts are always best! Meaning—"

me!"

"He changed his mind, though," Rosamund protested. "He proposed to me last!"

Carolyn grinned at her. "Why, he might just as well have counted us out, like playing tag to see who's it!" She pointed to each in turn, calling out, "My—mother—old—me—to—take—this—one!" The last was Rosamund.

"No, thanks!" Rosamund resumed. "I don't intend to be it!" She dropped her voice a little, glancing at the door. "Why, you ought to hear what Miss Fisher has been telling me about the business here! Why, it seems Mr. Bonistelle's awfully hard up—barely paying expenses—all sorts of unpaid bills piling up, too. He may have to blow over to Sixth avenue, even! Haven't he got a nerve, though?"

Mrs. Royalty rose like a Spartan, determined, hard. "Girl, I know what I'm going to do! I intend to tell him just what I think of him, and send him packing!"

"There!" Carolyn interposed. "Now, you're talking, Renna! Let's get down to business, and decide what to do. We're all in the same fix and we must hold together."

"Yes, we ought to take a stand," Renna agreed.

"And Hall ought to take a tumble!" from Rosamund.

"See here, let's do this thing according to Hloye," said Carolyn, taking the lead with all her humor. "First thing is, as we are one and all agreed to reject him tonight—"

"Yes!" Mrs. Royalty and Rosamund came in chorus.

"Well, then," said Carolyn, "I promise, as well, I hope to die!" She crossed herself. "Now, this is a serious thing, ladies. No one of us can go back on our word. It must be one—two—three—and out for it. Bonistelle! Well, that's agreed. Now for the details—"

"Oh, I simply can't wait to tell him!" exclaimed Mrs. Royalty. "I hate the man!"

"So do I!" growled Rosamund. "I think he ought to be horsewhipped!"

"Well," said Carolyn, "I must say I agree with you both. I consider Hall Bonistelle a perfectly conceived and admirably rendered cad!"

At this moment the door swung open and, humming a jolly tune, in walked Hall Bonistelle. There was a trio of "Oh's" in soprano, mezzo-soprano and contralto as the ladies caught sight of him.

CHAPTER IX.

He came in with a smile, but, at first glimpse of his visitors, it faded swiftly into a look of terror. But Hall was game; he pulled himself together and smiled again. It was with a fairly creditable expression of affability that he exclaimed: "Well, this is an unexpected pleasure!" He went from one to another offering his hand, then he drew off his gloves and looked his guests over anxiously. The atmosphere was like that before a thunder storm.

Then he drew a breath of sudden relief. Flodie was entering. Flodie was smiling. Smiling that smile, he seemed to come to himself, as if after a disturbing dream.

"Oh!" said Flodie, "are you back already? I was so busy I didn't hear you."

"Yes, I forgot my watch. You know I've got to have it repaired. I'll get it now." He turned to the ladies with a new enthusiasm. "I'm awfully sorry I'm in such a hurry, but I've got a lot to do this afternoon."

Flodie appeared nervous. "Miss Gale is waiting for me to do her proofs, you know," she said. "I've finished the others, Mr. Bonistelle. I think the ladies will excuse you; I can attend to them, all right!" She walked slowly back to the stockroom, giving him a meaning glance as she left.

"Oh, yes, don't wait, Mr. Bonistelle," said Mrs. Royalty.

"Well, I'll have to go then, I suppose. Make yourselves quite at home, ladies; I'll be back in a minute." He left impatiently.

Carolyn thought a moment. "Say we've got so much to talk over, we can't discuss it here. Hall may be back any moment. I'll tell you. Wait a moment!" She walked up to the stockroom door and opened it. "Miss Fisher!" she called.

Flodie appeared, wondering what she could be wanted for.

"I say, Miss Fisher, couldn't we go into the reception room for a while? We've got some things to talk over. About the party tonight, you know?"

"Why certainly," was Flodie's reply. "The studio's being decorated, but the reception room is all ready, and no body will disturb you. Go right in."

"Come on!" said Carolyn, turning to the other ladies. "We'll have it out right now, and decide on everything!" She led the way in.

Hardly had they disappeared when Flodie emerged again. She took a step toward the door they had left ajar, and listened. Then she sat down at her desk, smiling.

"So far, so good!" she thought. Her scheme had worked perfectly. It was not for nothing that Flodie had watched women, laughed at them, analyzed them and flung them away to the wind. But now, what? Was she any nearer to getting Hall for herself? Doubtless she considered her prospects. She was as intensely concentrated on the effort as the tiger waiting to leap on her prey. All to be won of it, however, was a little, quiet, gray-eyed girl, pathetically bending over her accounts.

It was not many minutes before Hall came in, thoughtfully winding a gold watch in his left hand, and looking surprised.

"Where are they? Gone?"

"Oh, no," said Flodie. "In there!" She nodded toward the reception room.

Hall walked toward the door and looked in. Flodie watched him sharply. "Say," he said finally, turning to her, "there are three mighty nice girls, did you know it?"

"H'm," mumbled Flodie.

"They're all so sweet—by Jove, I hardly know which one I like best!" he went on. "They're charming; don't you think so?"

Flodie was very busy writing in a little book. "Yes," she said without looking up.

"No, but really, Flodie!"

"Oh, yes; really."

"By Jove, I hardly know which one I do like best!" Hall peeped into the reception room again curiously, through a narrow slit in the doorway.

"Well, you can't marry them all, can you?" Flodie looked up now, biting the end of her penholder viciously.

"No, that's the deuce of it. I almost wish I could."

"Mr. Bonistelle!"

"Well, then, I've got to jilt two of them. I wonder which one will be the lucky girl! Of course it all depends upon what they say to me tonight."

He stopped suddenly and turned to Flodie. "Say, what are they talking about in there, anyway?"

Twelve Innings.

B. & O. LOSES

South Connellsville Pirates Win in 11 Innings.

The B. & O. dropped a hot one to the South Connellsville Pirates in twelve innings last evening by the score of 1 to 0. The game was remarkably fast, the twelve innings being played in one hour and a half. The pitching on both sides was the best that has been displayed in Connellsville for some time. Adair allowing only three hits and however five. Adair did not allow a man to reach second and only three reached first, and only three of the Pirates reached third, two of them in the twelfth. The South Connellsville aggregation had six of the Connellsville Independent in their line-up, however the B. & O. boys are sorry that there were not nine of them. This was the second game played between the two clubs, the first resulting in a 2 to 1 victory for the B. & O.

Any clubs desiring games with the B. & O. can arrange a game by addressing H. T. Dick, Captain, Box 501, Connellsville, Penna.

EVERSON FIGHT LOCAL

Partitown Nine Proves Too Much for Them: Good Pitching.

The Everson Nine were defeated by the Partitown Nines in a 11 inning game yesterday, 2-1. The Nines lost the game on account of several costly errors, which let the runs slip in. The game was a pitchers' battle, sawed for Everson allowing but 5 hits and having 11 strikeouts while

MCGRAW HAS BITTER

Former Connellsville Player Now on Pitching Staff of Giants.

Bill Hitter, a former pitcher on the Connellsville club in the old O. & F. League of 1912, is now on the staff of the New York Giants. Hitter pitched the last two innings against Saratoga Springs and the Sunday papers devoted quite a little space to him.

Hitter was with the Philadelphia Nationals for a while and then he was passed along to the Wilmington, Del. team, where he was picked up by McGraw. He is only 21 years old, a right hander, and a little over six feet in height.
